Dear patron family,

As we move forward into these different and uncertain times, we aim to continue our existing distance learning formats at both buildings while incorporating new approaches along the way that suit all family needs.

Your partnership with us is crucial during this time, and we recognize that these circumstances are not ideal. However, our students are still learning in different ways while our teachers are working daily to explore the best approaches for every student.

Ongoing support and continued educational experiences for all students to maintain progress during this unprecedented time is reflective of tuition investments. Some schools are not exploring home learning options, but BMS is determined to do what we can with the tools and technology God has provisioned for us during this strange season.

At this time, tuition adjustments are not being considered due to these daily efforts on all teaching and administrative fronts. Again, if you have any educational needs during this time, please reach out to us. We have been happy to accommodate and adapt our instructional approaches for a number of families who have communicated with our teachers and office staff this week! In addition, if your family is experiencing financial hardships due to loss of employment, please contact Stacey Herman (hermansl@bmsprek12.org) to discuss your options.

Things look different for now, but our students are moving forward in positive ways!

Blessings to you and your family,

Nicholas J. Wilson
